This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

+ Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.

+ Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.

+ Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.

+ Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. PREFACE.

In this work it has been my aim to make it a complete guide to all subjects of study, covering almost the entire field of human activity. In other words, to help make accessible all the material on any particular subject. Obviously, the field to be covered is an exceedingly large one, and this must be brought within a book of less than the ordinary size. In order to save space, some of the earlier and redundant reference books have been omitted. It is therefore, upon the successful choosing of what is most necessary and suitable that the value of the work must largely depend.

In respect to arrangement, the reader will at once see that I have endeavored, by cross references, to unify and harmonize the whole. Related titles have in many cases been treated together, but it is believed that, by the complete system of cross references, this will not interfere with the utility of the book as a work of reference.

Great care has been taken in order that this edition may be useful, not only to teachers, students, librarians, scientific and literary writers, professional men and business men, but as a general book of reference for all who want to be put readily in the way of keeping up to the date in the literature of their life's work.

It is hoped that this book will suggest many sources of information on specific points or subjects which otherwise might be overlooked.

I submit these results of practical work and much careful study, in the hope that both in the selection of material and in the accuracy of treatment it may merit approval. I desire to acknowledge my indebtedness to the many correspondents who have assisted me in many ways.

New York, N. Y., July 19, 1909.

A PLEA FOR MORE REFERENCE BOOKS.

A great deal of valuable reference material can be obtained from the innumerable publications of our learned societies, that are issued from time to time. In some of these can be found articles and special memoirs on topics of scientific interest by writers well known for their special study of the subject dealt with; but, those who wish to keep track of, or to investigate the treatment of any particular subject that, perhaps, might have appeared in any one of these papers, will find them of little use, as a few indexes to these are provided.

I might also mention that articles of value appearing in some of our trade and professional journals to-day, are seldom referred to, as no means of reference to them can be found. Similarly, I have found many books, most of which have been published in the last decade, and which contain information respecting applications of science to the arts, manfactures, and industrial pursuits, that remain hidden away in some out-of-the-way corner of the library, simply because no index to these books have been compiled, that would refer those who are in search for original material.

It must be understood that the indexes to which I refer in this article, are those printed in book form, and containing a subject index and title index, with cross-references, for these are absolutely essential in such an index, as they help making accessible all the material on a particular subject.

Perhaps, the reason why a surprisingly small amount of sound work is accomplished by our teachers in school and college, to-day, in their research for original material, is, because of the limited number of indexes, guides, and reference books that are now available. Yet, no branch of research work at the present day offers greater opportunitity, while none is more urgently in need of original workers, than that which lies open to the teacher.

To be sure, the work of compiling an index is a time-consuming and dubious task, yet it is to be hoped that before long, some ambitious workers realizing the value of this vast amount of literature that to-day, lies untouched upon the dusty shelves, will at once set to work and compile reference books that will be written in a non-technical manner, and which will contain everything that has been written on any special subject. In this way, persons wishing to study a subject can readily get at the needed books for their stage of development.

And, in addition to books of this nature, there should be more guides that will tell of sources from which useful information can be obtained, including mention of special libraries and museums to which access may be obtained. Many of the interesting and valuable objects in some of our museums too often remain unstudied for want of handy description of them; indeed, many remain unnoticed, because there is no record of their existence. Who will in some measure supply this deficiency?

Henry Jacobs.

UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT—PUBLICATIONS

250. In recent years, there has been a steady growth and development of the scientific work of the Government. The work of the various bureaus of the Government cover practically the whole range of physical and commercial science. The results of these researches, together with all other action taken by the Government on the innumerable subjects with which it has to deal, are edited by salaried officials, and are published in reports, bulletins, circulars, and miscellaneous books and pamphlets.

A greater number of these public documents are distributed free, though the more popular ones are turned over, to the SUPERINTENDENT OF DOCUMENTS, who, as provided by law, is authorized to charge nominal prices for these publications —payable in advance. The SUPERINTENDENT OF DOCUMENTS, publishes, monthly, annually, and biennially, complete catalogues and indexes of public documents. These may be consulted at any of the principal libraries of the country.
